Doubtless the most potent cause of the advance in the market, and the one matter more than anything else that led to a frightened buying in o stock by speculators for the decline, was from the spring and winter wheat sections and the publication of a government cotton crop report less adverse than had been looked for. For over a forthnight back all the news from the Western agricultural districts, while still telling of unseasonably law temperatures, has bee provement in crop conditions; and this was corroborated to-day by the appearance of the Ohio State crop report for June, showing a statistical condition of winter wheat in the State of 77, as against 74 a month ago.

The government Agricultural Bureau, in its bulletin, put the condition of the cotton crop at 70.5 on May 25, as against 84.6 at this time last year, this year's condition being the lowest on record for the season. Nevertheless estimates have commonly prevailed in the cotton trade of a much poorer state of the crop than this, and the government's figures to day when they appeared caused a sharp dewhen they appeared caused a sharp de-cline in the price of the speculative cot-ton options. A rally in these prices fol-lowed, but quotations for the options still left off at a sharp decline from those of reports of better crop outlook in Eastern Europe.

vere the causes of weakness.

Corn developed considerable strength after opening a shade off, in sympathy with the break in wheat. Offerings have been scautry. The wet weather is expected to delay country shipments. Cash sales from the country are light, while shipping houses have been actively buying and selling. Current arrivals in the sample market were absorbed at about resterdance and are of excellent quality. Oats were easy early with wheat and on dull trade. Later there was an improved demand for July, which ruled strong.

Comparatively few crop reports were received, but here weather indicated an improved crop promise. Is All V YOUR AD IN THE HERALD
